

Research and feedback from motor carriers and drivers indicates that there is a significant shortage of available truck parking nationwide, in particular in the Northeast, and around major metropolitan areas such as New York City. The lack of adequate parking is a fundamental barrier to improved industry safety and efficiency. Without the ability to find safe parking on-demand, drivers are left with limited options including parking in unsafe locations and violating hours-of-service regulations in order to find safe and secure parking. TANY advocates for funding to improve and expand available overnight truck parking options across the state, as well as to invest in technology which would assist drivers in finding available parking. Additionally, TANY encourages the expansion of loading zones in New York City to provide adequate curb-side parking for necessary and critical deliveries.
